4	iExit 	The app offers a directory of services and businesses within 1.5 miles of the next 100 exits you will pass. This eliminates much of the guesswork that goes into road trips. Should you stop here, or will there be better food coming up? How far is the nearest gas station? Will there be a hotel in about half an hour? Now you know.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ iExit will locate <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◇ hotels/hospitals ◇ restaurants ◇ gas stations/diesel fuel ◇ rest stops ◇ campgrounds/RV parks ✓ If you tap on the icon for each service or business, it opens with more details. ✓ Another great thing about the app is that you can tell it what your favorite stops are. If you're always looking for a Starbucks, it will point you to every Starbucks on your path, a feature I have taken full advantage of. ✓ One problem with iExit — which, though its name might indicate otherwise, is available on Android — is that its knowledge seems somewhat out of date. It recently told me there was a Caribou Coffee close by, but the shop had closed nearly two years earlier.
